An early childhood development (ECD) practitioner is a professional who works with young children—typically from birth to around five years old—to support their physical, emotional, social, and cognitive development.

Their main goal is to create a safe, nurturing, and stimulating environment that helps children reach key developmental milestones and prepares them for formal schooling.

Key responsibilities include:

- Planning and implementing age-appropriate learning activities
- Observing and assessing children's progress and development
- Supporting children's emotional and social well-being
- Communicating with parents or caregivers about a child's growth and needs
- Ensuring a safe and inclusive learning environment
